An interstate move from Perth to Melbourne involves planning, timing, and logistics. And naturally, one of the first things people want to know is what the move will cost.

The final price depends on how much you're moving, how easy each property is to access, and whether the pickup and delivery addresses fall inside metro areas. Below, you'll find historical cost examples for Perth to Melbourne moves, along with the factors that influence your quote and what's included when you book with Fragile Removals.

Quick Cost Snapshot

Property Type	Estimated cost
Minimum Charge	$660
1-Bedroom Apartment	$1,450 – $1,885
2-Bedroom Apartment / Unit	$2,030 – $2,610
3-Bedroom Apartment / Unit	$2,500 – $3,125
3-Bedroom House	$3,250 – $3,750
4-Bedroom House	$3,875 – $5,000

Discuss any storage needed before or after transport and have rental, handling and redelivery charges included in the quote.

Confirm the transport, wrapping, loading and unloading scope in your quote. Check any insurance arrangement separately.

How We Calculate Your Moving Cost

Several practical elements determine the final cost of a Perth to Melbourne relocation. These factors influence the space required, the crew involved, and the time needed to complete the job.

Volume of Goods: The space occupied by your belongings affects truck capacity and price. Provide a complete inventory and ask how cubic metres are assessed. Smaller loads can have a higher per-unit cost because transport and crew still have base costs.

Distance and Location: Give both addresses and confirm any included metro allowance, depot travel and charges for more distant collection or delivery.

Access at Each Property : Access is one of the key variables in the overall quote. Tight driveways, multiple staircases, long walks from the truck to the door, restricted parking, or low overhead clearances may increase time on site. In more challenging areas, a smaller shuttle vehicle may be needed.

Furniture Assembly: Identify beds, wardrobes, desks and other items needing dismantling or reassembly. Confirm suitability, responsibility, labour and equipment in the quote.

Heavy or Fragile Items: Identify pianos, pool tables, safes, large furniture and valuable artwork separately. Dimensions, weight, access and handling requirements may need a separate assessment and price.

Timing: Ask for the rates and availability for your dates, including any after-hours, weekend or public-holiday charges.

Peak Season: Compare available dates early if you plan to move in December or January. Availability and price depend on the route and booking; flexibility does not guarantee a discount.

Minimum Charge: Confirm the current minimum charge and billed volume for your route. A small load still requires transport and crew, so quote the complete intended inventory together.

Example Move

Our historical example for a two-bedroom unit move from Subiaco to Carlton used $2,200–$2,700, with good lift access and a clear driveway at both ends. The example varied with the inventory and assessed volume.

Our historical example for a three-bedroom house move from Booragoon to Brunswick used $3,400–$3,900, with access, depot distance and furniture dismantling affecting the estimate.

These examples highlight how size, property layout, and timing contribute to the total cost of a Perth to Melbourne move.

Agree the inclusions in your quote

We can quote door-to-door transport, furniture protection, loading, unloading and an itemised inventory. Confirm each task and any materials in your written scope.

Choose additional services where needed:

Full or selected-item packing

Furniture dismantling and reassembly

Storage , including handling and return delivery

Car or pet transport through a separately confirmed provider

Cleaning or rubbish removal, subject to provider and scope confirmation

Request written confirmation of any included or optional insurance arrangement separately and read the policy’s exclusions, excess and claims process. Use our insurance checklist before relying on cover.

Coordinate the Perth to Melbourne move

We can help assess your inventory and discuss packing, transport, storage and delivery tasks. Confirm the crew and any separate provider, who supplies updates and how changes will be handled. The quote should make the volume, access and pricing assumptions clear.

Turn the Perth to Melbourne range into a comparable quote

List the items actually travelling and identify anything staying behind or travelling separately. A bedroom category is only a starting point: two homes with the same number of rooms may contain different furniture, carton quantities and specialist items. If the quote uses cubic metres, ask how the inventory was assessed and what happens if the load changes.

Compare the access assumptions at both properties with the assumptions below the price table. Record stairs, lifts, parking, long carries and any need for a smaller vehicle. Check the included metro area and depot travel, especially where an example uses a named suburb rather than your address.

Separate transport and handling from packing, furniture assembly, specialist items, vehicle or pet transport and storage. Confirm the charging basis, minimums and date-related rates for your own booking. Treat table bands and worked examples as budget illustrations; your written quote should explain the actual assumptions and total.

Check timing and changes before paying

Ask for the proposed collection and delivery windows and who will contact you while goods are in transit. Confirm whether a sole-use container or another service option changes the schedule or price. Keep essential belongings available for the full expected gap rather than planning only for the driving time.

If the inventory, dates or access changes, send us the revised information and request an updated estimate. If keys are delayed, discuss storage and redelivery and confirm the revised charges. Compare storage options and check insurance arrangements for those stages.

Keep the estimate, scope, inventory and booking terms together. If a figure is unclear, ask the coordinator to explain the assumption or line item; do not silently replace the quoted amount with the lowest table value. Use the removalist comparison guide to compare responsibility and terms as well as price.

How long does a Perth to Melbourne move take?

Our Perth to Melbourne planning examples allow around 10 days from collection to delivery. A sole-use container may have a different schedule. Confirm the current service, collection and delivery windows for your inventory, dates and access. Ask who provides updates if the schedule changes and keep essentials available for the agreed window.

For the Perth-to-Melbourne cost estimate, do you offer insurance for interstate moves?

Ask for the current goods-cover options alongside your Perth to Melbourne quote and check whether the cost is included or additional. Obtain the provider and relevant authorisation details and the policy information before deciding. Clarify valuation, exclusions, excess, owner-packed items, storage and the reporting process. Identify fragile or high-value pieces while preparing the inventory so the quoted arrangement can address them. A removal price or the business’s own insurance does not establish a policy for every customer item or event.

For the Perth-to-Melbourne cost estimate, can Fragile Removals pack for me?

Yes. For Perth to Melbourne, request a full-home pack or a partial pack for selected delicate or bulky goods, then compare the quoted scope with self-packing. Check materials, packing date, labelling and whether unpacking or furniture preparation is included. Self-packing still needs suitable supplies and time before collection, so include those costs in the comparison. Identify unusual items for assessment and keep personal essentials separate. Have the chosen service and price recorded so the transport estimate is not mistaken for the cost of a full pack.

For the Perth-to-Melbourne cost estimate, is there a minimum charge?

Our historical planning figures from 11 December 2025 used a minimum billed volume of 4 cubic metres and a monetary minimum of $660 for Perth to Melbourne. Confirm the current minimums and what they cover in your written quote. A single item can still incur base transport and crew costs; extra items are not automatically free because volume, access and handling can change the total.

When is the most cost-effective time to move interstate?

Compare mid-week dates and dates outside December and January if your schedule allows. There is no guaranteed cheapest date or discount. Ask us to price the same Perth to Melbourne inventory, access and services for the dates you can use, and include any extra accommodation, storage or time away from work in the comparison.

For the Perth-to-Melbourne cost estimate, do you move offices as well as homes?

Yes. We help with household and commercial moves on the Perth to Melbourne route. Provide an equipment inventory, floor plans, access windows and operational priorities. Agree packing, labelling, storage and placement, with IT backup, disconnection, reconnection and testing assigned separately to the appropriate provider. Confirm the business schedule and responsibilities in writing.

For the Perth-to-Melbourne cost estimate, what should I confirm before booking a Perth to Melbourne move?

Use the Perth to Melbourne table to start the budget, then ask us to price your inventory and both addresses. Confirm the measured or assessed volume, minimum charge, access assumptions, service dates and what is excluded. Identify packing, assembly, storage and partner services separately. Ask who performs each stage and who handles updates. Read payment and change terms before accepting the quote. If the written amount differs from a property-size example, ask which assumptions explain it rather than expecting the guide’s band to override the actual job.

For the Perth-to-Melbourne cost estimate, is the driving time the same as the delivery time?

No. The transport distance for Perth to Melbourne does not determine the date when your furniture will be available inside the new home. Collection, loading, service scheduling, any storage and final access sit around the line-haul journey. Ask for the quoted service’s collection and delivery windows and whether a faster option changes the price. Include personal travel, temporary accommodation and essentials for that gap in your budget. Confirm a fixed receiving deadline before committing to plans that depend on the goods arriving.

For the Perth-to-Melbourne cost estimate, what if my new property is not ready?

Include the likely storage gap in your Perth to Melbourne quote. Confirm the facility, term, access, handling and redelivery charges, and the conditions of any accepted storage offer. Keep essentials outside the stored load and tell us when the receiving date, address or access changes. Have the revised schedule and price recorded before relying on delivery.

How should I use the published Perth to Melbourne cost table?

Use it to form an initial budget, then obtain a quote for your own move. For example, our historical planning table from 11 December 2025 lists $2,030–$2,610 for a two-bedroom apartment or unit, based on inner-Perth to inner-Melbourne transport with standard ground-floor access. Your actual cubic metres, suburbs, stairs, parking, dates and requested services can change the price. A property's bedroom count is only a rough indication of its load. Send an inventory and access details, then check the written inclusions and exclusions rather than selecting a price band as a fixed offer.

For the Perth-to-Melbourne cost estimate, can cars or pets travel as part of the relocation?

Tell us if you need car or pet transport alongside the household move. Confirm availability, the separate provider, locations, dates, preparation requirements, charges and transit contact. A furniture booking does not establish that the other service is included or follows the same timetable. Keep the confirmations together and arrange who will hand over and receive each part. For the Perth-to-Melbourne cost estimate, keep any route-, service- or property-specific variation with the accepted written scope.
