

Moving House Checklist and Planning Links

Canonical: <https://www.fragileremovals.com.au/moving-tips/moving-house-checklist/>

Details:

This page points to the complete checklist and the supporting tasks that often sit beside it. Use one dated master list for your household, then assign each task to a person and record the provider or account details needed to complete it.

Start with the complete checklist

Open the complete moving house checklist and replace the example timing with your own collection, key-handover and delivery dates. Add the contacts responsible for utilities, property access, packing, transport, cleaning, children, pets and essential documents.

For the order and duration of preparation tasks, use How Long Does It Take to Move House? . Keep the plan current when settlement, access or the inventory changes.

Keep address changes with the moving plan

Use the change-of-address checklist for government records, financial accounts, utilities, subscriptions, health providers and regular deliveries. Record confirmation numbers or effective dates where they matter instead of relying on a submitted form alone.

Separate essentials from the removal load

Keep identification, medication, chargers, keys, booking documents, children's or pets' immediate needs and enough everyday items for the delivery gap accessible. An interstate move may require a longer essentials plan than a local collection and delivery.

If you still need a removal estimate, prepare both addresses, the inventory, access constraints and requested services, then request a written quote .

Which moving checklist should I use?

Use the complete moving house checklist as the master list, then add your own dates, contacts and responsibilities. This quick-links page connects that list with the moving timeline and change-of-address tasks. Avoid maintaining separate uncoordinated lists that can give different people conflicting dates or instructions.

When should I update the checklist?

Update it whenever the collection or delivery date, property access, inventory or booked services change. Record the revised responsibility and any confirmation from the relevant provider. A completed task should mean the required result is confirmed, not merely that an email or form was sent.

What should stay outside the removal load?

Keep identification, medication, keys, chargers, booking documents and the essentials needed during the delivery gap with you. Add suitable items for children, pets, work and overnight accommodation. The exact list depends on the household and the agreed delivery window, so check it again before the loading area is closed.